As a modern development model with Chinese characteristics, Chinese-style modernization, as an important strategic goal and process of the development of socialism with Chinese characteristics, has a multi-dimensional and profound connection with the deep national spiritual strength of the cohesion of the Chinese nation. In-depth exploration of the fit between the two in terms of theoretical origin, practical path and value goal will help to enrich the understanding of China's modernization construction and the inheritance and development of national spirit at the theoretical level, and provide scientific guidance and decision-making basis for better promoting Chinese-style modernization and enhancing the cohesion of the Chinese nation at the practical level.[1] By accurately grasping the internal relationship and synergy mechanism between the two, we can provide a solid and reliable basis for decision-making and action guidance for formulating scientific and reasonable modernization development strategic planning, national policies and regulations, and social governance measures, so as to more effectively promote the steady progress of Chinese-style modernization, continuously enhance the cohesion of the Chinese nation, and gather majestic strength for the realization of the Chinese dream of the great rejuvenation of the Chinese nation.

2 CHINESE-STYLE MODERNIZATION AND THE COHESION OF THE CHINESE NATION HAVE THE HOMOLOGY OF THEORETICAL BASIS.

2.1 THE FOUNDATION OF MARXIST THEORY

Marxism profoundly reveals the law of the development of human society and provides a scientific world outlook and methodology for Chinese-style modernization. Marxist theory on the dialectical relationship between productivity and production relations, economic foundation and superstructure, guides Chinese modernization to pay attention to the improvement of productivity and the adjustment of production relations in economic development, so as to achieve sustained and healthy economic development. At the same time, Marxist national theory emphasizes ethnic equality, unity and common development, which is highly consistent with the concept of harmonious coexistence and unity of all ethnic groups in the cohesion of the Chinese nation. [2] For example, in the process of the establishment and implementation of the system of regional ethnic autonomy, Marxist ethnic theory provides a theoretical basis for ensuring the equal rights of all ethnic groups and promoting the development of ethnic areas, thus enhancing the sense of identity and belonging of all ethnic groups to the great family of the Chinese nation, and consolidating the institutional foundation of the cohesion of the Chinese nation.

2.2 THE NOURISHMENT OF CHINESE EXCELLENT TRADITIONAL CULTURE

Chinese excellent traditional culture has a long history and is profound. It is the common cultural source of Chinese modernization and the cohesion of the Chinese nation. The idea of "Great Harmony" and "benevolence" advocated by Confucianism embodies the pursuit of social harmony and people's unity, and provides value orientation for the cohesion of the Chinese nation. In the process of Chinese modernization, this pursuit is transformed into the efforts of social fairness and justice and the common prosperity of all the people. The Taoist concept of "law of nature" enlightens Chinese modernization to pay attention to the harmonious coexistence of man and nature, avoid over-exploitation and destruction, guarantee the foundation of sustainable development of the Chinese nation, and then maintain the material environment foundation of national cohesion. In addition, the thoughts of "family and country feelings" and "the rise and fall of the world, the responsibility of the husband" in the traditional culture have stimulated the sense of responsibility and mission of the members of all ethnic groups to contribute to the modernization of the country. It has become the spiritual power source of the cohesion of the Chinese nation in the process of modernization and promoted the continuous development of Chinese-style modernization.

3.1 DIMENSIONS OF ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AND PEOPLE'S LIVELIHOOD IMPROVEMENT

3.1.1 Industrial upgrading and employment absorption

Chinese modernization emphasizes the optimization and upgrading of economic structure, from traditional industries to high-end manufacturing, modern service industry, innovative technology industry and other fields. In this process, the vigorous development of emerging industries has created a large number of diversified employment opportunities. For example, in the field of digital economy, the rise of e-commerce, big data, artificial intelligence and other industries has absorbed labor from different ethnic groups and regions. With their own skills and wisdom, the members of all ethnic groups participate in it, which not only realizes the economic income increase of individuals and families, but also promotes the integration and development of ethnic areas and the national economy. This economic development model has laid a solid material foundation for the enhancement of the cohesion of the Chinese nation. In the process of participating in economic construction and sharing development achievements, the interdependence of all ethnic groups has increased, and the exchanges and cooperation among ethnic groups have become more frequent, which has further strengthened the awareness of the Chinese national community and enabled national cohesion to be condensed and sublimated in the interaction of economic practice.

3.1.2 Regional coordination and balanced development

Chinese modernization focuses on the implementation of regional coordinated development strategy, aiming to narrow the development gap between the eastern coastal areas and the central and western regions, ethnic areas and non-ethnic areas. Through the westward extension of infrastructure construction, such as large-scale investment in transportation, energy, communication and other fields, the development potential of ethnic areas has been released. For example, the "Western Development" strategy has promoted infrastructure improvement, characteristic resource development and industrial cultivation in Xinjiang, Tibet, Inner Mongolia and other regions. This enables people in ethnic areas to better integrate into the overall development pattern of the country, and forms a close cooperative relationship among ethnic groups in terms of resource complementarity, industrial synergy, and talent exchange. The coordinated development of the region has promoted the exchanges and exchanges between ethnic groups, reduced the estrangements and contradictions that may arise due to regional differences, provided a broad space and practice platform for the consolidation of the cohesion of the Chinese nation, and made all ethnic groups feel the integrity and inclusiveness of the Chinese nation family in the practice of regional coordination.

3.2 CULTURAL INHERITANCE AND INNOVATION DIMENSION

3.2.1 Modern transformation of traditional culture

In the process of Chinese modernization, the inheritance and innovation of Chinese excellent traditional culture has become an important content. As the treasure of Chinese culture, ethnic cultures have been re-excavated and creatively transformed in the wave of modernization. For example, the traditional handicrafts of ethnic minorities, such as Miao silver jewelry and Dong embroidery, have realized the transformation from traditional handicrafts to cultural and creative products by combining with modern design concepts and market demand. This process not only enables the inheritance and promotion of national culture, but also creates a new economic growth point for ethnic areas. In the practice of cultural inheritance and innovation, the cultures of all ethnic groups learn from each other and promote each other, enriching the connotation of Chinese culture. This kind of cultural practice has deepened the sense of identity and belonging of all ethnic groups to Chinese culture. The cohesion of the Chinese nation has been strengthened in the interactive practice of cultural inheritance and innovation, and all ethnic groups are more closely united with culture as a link.

In the education system, Chinese excellent traditional culture and national culture have become important educational contents. From the cultural enlightenment in the stage of basic education to the professional research in the stage of higher education, cultural education runs through. For example, in the school education in ethnic areas, the setting of bilingual education and ethnic cultural characteristic courses not only inherits the national language and culture, but also promotes the learning and mastery of the national common language and Chinese culture by ethnic students. The talents of all ethnic groups cultivated through cultural education have become the main force of national cultural inheritance, innovation and modernization. Their practical activities in the fields of cultural exchanges, scientific and technological innovation, and social services have promoted knowledge sharing and intelligent exchanges among ethnic groups, further enhanced the cohesion of the Chinese nation, and continuously enhanced the national cohesion in the practical chain of cultural education and talent training. [3]

3.3 DIMENSIONS OF SOCIAL GOVERNANCE AND HARMONIOUS CONSTRUCTION

Chinese modernization promotes the modernization of social governance system and governance capacity, and the construction of grassroots democracy is an important part of it. In ethnic areas, the implementation of the grassroots democracy system fully guarantees the political participation rights of the people of all ethnic groups. For example, in the villagers' self-government and community self-government organizations in ethnic autonomous areas, members of all ethnic groups participate in the management of grassroots affairs through democratic elections, democratic decision-making, democratic management, and democratic supervision. They jointly discussed community development planning, ethnic cultural activities organization, public service facilities construction and other issues. [4] This practice of grassroots democracy has enhanced the sense of ownership and responsibility of all ethnic groups, and promoted mutual understanding and trust among ethnic groups. [4] The cooperative and co-governance model formed by all ethnic groups in the practice of grassroots

In these multicultural spaces, through the construction of community culture, national unity and progress to create activities and other practical forms, to promote the exchange of national culture display and mutual respect. For example, some urban communities hold ethnic cultural festivals, neighborhood festivals and other activities, so that different ethnic residents have the opportunity to share their own cultural customs, food, art and so on. This pluralistic integration of social practice reduces misunderstandings and conflicts between ethnic groups and creates a harmonious social atmosphere. The cohesion of the Chinese nation has been nourished and grown in the social practice of pluralistic integration. For example, in overseas infrastructure construction projects, China's engineering team is composed of professionals from all ethnic groups. They overcome cultural differences and technical problems, efficiently complete project construction, win international praise, and enhance the international image and cohesion of the Chinese nation. [6] The spread of Chinese excellent culture in international cultural exchanges is also inseparable from the common support and participation of various national cultures.
